Name _____ Date _____

Two learners need a kettle for their shared kitchen. They have $35. Kettle A costs $28, holds one liter and can be collected today. Kettle B costs $32, holds two liters and has a $5 delivery charge.

They usually make only two cups of tea, so one liter is enough. They need the kettle tomorrow. The shop says delivery for B takes three days. Both kettles have a one-year warranty.

Ben recommends A because B costs too much after delivery and will arrive too late. His partner agrees, but asks whether A is available in the shop. Ben sends an inquiry. The reply confirms that two are in stock and explains that they must keep the receipt if they need to use the warranty.
